lust so with the soul. There is no such thing as the cultivation of the spiritual nature without that nature being willing to pay the price by sacrifice. This is a great truth, but sacrifice. This is a great truth, but imperfectly understood. Many people make the fatal mistake of supposing that this law, while ob-taining in earthly matters, can with impunity be set aside when the spir-itual life is in question. Yet self-denial, self-abasement, self-sacrifice are indispensable conditions of the soul.

Now, the great enemy of all sacrifice-the great hindrance to all selfishness are, in many ways, synony-mous terms. Sin is to the soul just what a state of disease is to the body of a child. It checks the natural, proper growth and develop-of nowers with which man is endowed—the mind, the will, and the affections. But I have space only to touch on one of these—the mind—in

We have only to consider for a moment to realize the infinite super-iority of the human mind over that of all lower creation. God has made us for Himself, and He desires to work out His holy purpose in har-mony with our reason. The mind of man can he stored with holy knowledge. It is capable of underknowledge. It is capable of under-istanding something of the Will of God and of being developed in such a way as to ennoble and elevate the whole heing. But if the mind is to attain this high state of perfection, it can only be brought about by the mind being willing for repeated acts of self-sear-silling for repeated acts of self-sear-silling. Man can only store of self-saerifice. Man can only store-lis mind with knowfedge that is worth having us he denies that which is frivolous. The capacity of the cup, so to speak, is limited, and it can hold only a given quantity.

Bealess Reading

It is for this reason that I deplore the time and thought wasted on useless reading. I deplore it, not merely because of the emptiness and trashy quality of the matter read, but because of its evil effect on the mind itself, "According to their pas-ture so were they fed," writes the prophet.

One reason many people are incapable of finding pleasure in the consideration of divine things is because they refuse to specifice the lower picasures of the mind, and continue to indulge it with what is unworthy and valueless. Others, again, et dard off purity and minds, but—strugge, as how seldom are they also gree to realize their.
They need the power the work upon them; they was less sufficiency and to subside teaching of God in humbing mind.

Cause of Happiness

Some time ago a journalist me the reason for the confidence happiness which he noticed that many Salvationists enjoyed I plained that this came from found—the mind, the will, and the decimen. But have space unly to touch on one of these—the mind—in this article.

We have only to consider for moment to realize the infinite superiority of the human mind over that of all lower resultion. God his made to for Himself, and the deciment of the mean that the mean that

PRESENT-DAY ASSURANCE

By Mr. Blanche Johnston
As I listened to the Commissioner's great appeal for Holy Power inthe Officers' Councils at Toronto, and the splendid testimonies by the and the spientid testimonies by the various speakers, one text kept coursing through my mind: "I will do better unto you than at your he-minuters."

do better unto you than at your he-ginnings."

It deals, of course, with the con-dition of Israel when God invited them, through His prophet Eze-kiel, to return from their wander-ings, from Himself. It was a gen-erous promise, which we have not space to enlarge upon here. But I wanted to spiritualize the promise.

Our Beginnings

Our Beginnings
What were our beginnings — our spiritual beginnings? Our thoughts turn in reminiscence to our first day's service for the Cross and the Christ. Do you not love to think of the time when you first knew Jesus as your Saviour? What Joy! What peace! Wity, it seemed as if the brid's samp a weeter song, the flow-brid samp a weeter song, the flow-brid samp as weeter song the flow-brid samp as weeter song the flow-brid samp and the sample and the sample are the sample and the sample are the sample and the sample and the sample are the sample and sample and the sa lancy, the stars danced and elittered in the evening sky as perhaps you wended your glad way home from a wended your glad way home from a joyous meeting.

How calm the peace that filled your heart after those first testlmonies to a Saviour's redeeming Grace. How forgiving you were to those who persecuted you! How tender your heart was toward the poor drunkard! How sympathetic and charitals. and charitable to thuse who were outside the fold of Christian experience! Surely—yes, surely they were "good old days."

"good old days,"

No sacrifice was counted too dear, no cross too heavy to bear for our Lord. Your heart beat in glad our Lord. Your heart best in glad acquiescence and response to the demand, "Anywhere for Jesus." O my beloved comrades, do not let us depreciate the joys and blessings and services of our first experience! They are precious, full of cherished memories and rich in their power to cheer and make us strong in the testing times. All they mean to us in sweetness and joy can never be taken away, and were but the foretaste of the full fruition of perfected lile in His presence. In the after-time we shall be children in one sense, when in His Kingdom one sense, when in His Kingdom "we see Him as He Is."

But, while we prize all the glories of the hygone time as ogy, dearest treasure, let us have the ippward, the cunward look.

This is why I remind you of the State of the hygone the aspect of the past will turn to askes if we live only in the dim dispiritual fire of the past will turn to askes if we live only in the dim dispiritual fire of the past will turn to askes if we live only in the dim dispiritual for better of the past—perhaps not such such as the best of the past—perhaps not such excherant spirit and honoyancy of the control of the past—perhaps in the bridens and sorrown of the day wear us down. Perhaps it may be with you as in my own experience; you may have to learn to wait as well as work. The trials and disapointments that come to all may well as work. The trads and disap-pointments that come to all may have smitten your beart, and though He gives healing halm there are aching scars not the less painful he-cause bidden away in your spirit's secret recesses.
